Rep. Kilday Heads 13-Member Pay Group; Both House & Senate Plan Early Hearings

Legislation to raise military pay is scheduled for early hearings before both the Senate and House Armed Services Committees.

Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) of the Senate Committee told THE JOURNAL "There will have to be an increase in military pay." He said his group will open hearings on the proposal "as soon as possible."

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Committee said the pay boost plan, along with the new National Reserve Plan, is the second order of business before his group.

The House Committee first will take up (on 31 Jan) the bill to extend the draft and the Dependents Assistance Act. Following these hearings, two separate subcommittees will begin consideration of the pay and reserve proposals.

"It is my hope," Mr. Vinson said, "that both of these subcommittees will be conducting hearings simultaneously."

House Armed Services Subcommittee Number 2, headed by Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), will launch the pay study. Mr. Kilday introduced the pay bill (HR 2607) in the House last week, con-

Pay Hike "Mandatory," Says SecDef Wilson

Inability of the Services to retain sufficient numbers of career personnel "makes it mandatory," Defense Secretary Wilson told the House Committee this week, "that we bring their compensation and benefits more in line with that which men of equivalent experience, ability and responsibility receive in civilian life." He added, "We feel it is imperative, if we are to attract and retain the type of personnel that we all know is necessary, that our career military personnel receive an appropriate increase in compensation, better housing, better medical care for their dependents, and are free from worry about the reduction of such things as commissary and post exchange privileges."

Ask Extension Of Draft And Dependents Assistance Act; Hearings Open Next Week

Congressional hearings will open next week on a proposal to extend the draft and the Dependents Assistance Act for an additional four years.

Both laws are due to expire on 1 July and the Defense Department has asked that they be continued in effect through mid-1959.

Extension of the Dependents Assistance Act will enable enlisted personnel with dependents to continue to draw present allowances for quarters.

The draft extension will give the Services authority to continue the induction of personnel under the Selective Service Act.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee introduced the Defense measure (HR 3005) in the House. He also announced that his Committee will begin hearings on the bill next Monday, 31 Jan. It is expected that Assistant Secretary of Defense Carter L. Burgess, Pentagon manpower chief, and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director, will be among the first witnesses called.

In asking for the draft extension, the Defense Department said U. S. basic manpower needs "cannot be met by voluntary measures alone." Planned strength goals for the end of fiscal '56 total 2,850,000, the Department noted, and "voluntary forces could not be maintained appreciably in excess of a million and a half."

General Dahlquist Orders OCAFF Changes To 'Enhance Prestige Of The Fighting Man'

On the eve of its redesignation as the Continental Army Command, the Office, Chief of Army Field Forces at Ft. Monroe, Va., has been reorganized by General John E. Dahlquist, USA.

The reorganization, which establishes special Staff Sections of Infantry, Artillery and Armor, each headed by a major general, is designed "to produce the best trained and best equipped combat soldiers within each arm and thereby enhance the prestige of the fighting man."

The Infantry Section will be headed by Maj. Gen. Armistead D. Mead, USA, former Commanding General of the 1st Cavalry Division, Far East Command.

Maj. Gen. William E. Waters, USA, formerly Commander of the 1st Guided Missile Brigade, Ft. Bliss, Tex., is Chief of the new Artillery Section.

Chief of the Armor Section is Maj. Gen. Leander L. Doan, USA, former Commanding General of the 2d Armored Division in Germany.

General Dahlquist said the chief of each combat arms section is responsible for "advising the Chief of Army Field Forces on all matters pertaining to their respective branches; determining the state of readiness of individuals and units; determining doctrine, tactics, and techniques and organization; requirements for product improvement of material; and reviewing in coordination with other Army Field Forces staff sections, all matters pertaining to infantry, artillery and armor."

Heretofore, general staff sections, together with the Combat Arms Advisory

New Reserve Plan Has "False Teeth"; Extraction Made To Avert Controversy

Heralded for months as a plan which would have strong teeth in it to assure satisfactory participation—unlike present law—the National Reserve Plan, as presented to Congress this week, appears to have sustained, at the last moment, a significant and weakening extraction.

In a message to Congress on 13 Jan., President Eisenhower said that persons who fail to participate satisfactorily in the Reserve Forces "will be given other than an honorable discharge at the end of their period of military obligation."

Immediately, there was widespread speculation that such explicit punishment, notwithstanding the fact the President noted it is authorized (though not implemented) under existing law, would be highly controversial at the Capitol.

The bill, as now presented to Congress, omits a reference to the "other than honorable discharge" for those persons who serve two years on active duty, but who do not participate in the Reserve.

Such individuals, says the bill, "shall, in addition to any other action which may be taken by the appropriate Secretary, and upon approval by that Secretary, not accrue any further eligibility to benefits under title III of the Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement

Buildup Of USAF Ahead Of Schedule; Will Reach 131 Wings By June 1956

The Air Force buildup towards 137 wings is being achieved ahead-of-schedule, with a late revision adding an unplanned wing for FY '56.

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson told the House Armed Services Committee this week he has been advised by General Nathan F. Twining, USAF Chief of Staff, that the Air Force would reach a strength of 131 wings by 30 June 1956.

Only two weeks ago, in a budget summary for Pentagon newsmen, Assistant Defense Secretary W. J. McNeil had told of Air Force pride in being able to shoot for 130 wings in FY '56, instead of the 127 previously scheduled.

Secretary Wilson said the Air Force active aircraft inventory would grow to over 23,000 by 30 June 1956 and continue to increase in FY '57.

He said "another substantial increment of military construction funds will be requested early this Spring to push forward the construction of air bases and other military installations required by the expanding Air Force Program."

"False Teeth" Seen In Reserve Program

Act of 1948" (Public Law 810).
Significantly, a Reservist must, of course, participate satisfactorily to accrue retirement benefits under this legislation. So there is hardly any new punishment provided here.

The main reason, say many military leaders, that the Nation now lacks an effective Reserve is the fact that there has been a universal reluctance—in the absence of specific penalties—to penalize men with Reserve obligations who do not participate satisfactorily.

It has been estimated that less than 4 out of every 100 soldiers discharged during the last few years have agreed to serve with Reserve units.

Neither the Defense Department nor the Department of Justice has taken action to penalize those who do not participate.

One major cause for this reluctance is the lack of explicit penalties, probably left that way by Congress on purpose, and the consequent feeling that punitive action would be politically unacceptable and possibly questionable from a legal

THE DEFENSE BEGINS

The start of thousands of hours of testimony by Pentagon officials in defense of military plans and fiscal policies for the next 18 months was made on 26 Jan. by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson and Admiral Arthur Radford, USN, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

They appeared before the House Armed Services Committee to discuss principles which were employed in development of the military programs for the fiscal year beginning 1 July.

point of view.

The National Reserve Plan provides another so-called penalty provision, this pertaining to persons who serve only six months on active duty and who then have a Reserve obligation of 9½ years.

The bill stipulates that failure to participate satisfactorily would result in the induction into the Armed Forces of such an individual, who then would serve not more than 18 months—or no more than the 24 months period of the present draft.

This feature undoubtedly will draw opposition on two counts. On the one hand, the charge will be made that this provides no substantial penalty, since breaking of an agreement to participate in the Reserve would be followed by only that much more additional active service as is required of the two-year draftee.

On the other hand, the Services who would get such individuals, the Army and the Marine Corps, would not be overjoyed, to say the least, to have active military service prescribed as a penalty. The Services have always felt bitter when civilian judges have on occasion permitted a young man to go free after having broken the law, provided he joins the military.

Hearings on the National Reserve Plan will begin next week in a House Armed Services Subcommittee, headed by Representative Overton Brooks (D-La.).

It is noteworthy that whereas Pentagon officials during recent months have spoken of the division of the Reserve Forces into "Service Callable" and "Selective Callable" components, the bill provides for a Ready Reserve and a Standby Reserve, as is the case in the Armed Forces Reserve Act.

The Defense Department said in a letter to Congress accompanying the new bill:

"THE READY RESERVE would be a trained and suitably organized force constituting the reserve manpower base for the initial phases of a general mobilization. Based on the existing international situation, and projected Active Forces strengths and deployments, the Ready Reserve requirements are currently estimated at 2,950,000. This size would be subject to periodic review and to appropriate adjustments to conform with changing conditions. Members of

NAUTILUS SUCCESS OPENS NEW FIELDS

Successful sea tests of the world's first atomic-powered ship, the USS Nautilus, whose performance to date "has exceeded expectations. . . opens up an entire new field of propulsion, not only for ships, but eventually for aircraft," Mr. Wilson told the House Committee.

He said the Defense Department FY '56 program "lays particular stress on the utilization of nuclear energy in military operations."

Mr. Wilson said the Research and Development program "also emphasizes new equipment and techniques required to provide the mobility needed to meet the changed requirements of nuclear warfare and the development of operational guided missiles to meet the urgent requirements of our air defense and retaliatory forces."

His praise of the Nautilus followed completion on 24 Jan. of the second cruise of the vessel's sea trials, during which she made over 50 dives.

Up to that time, the Nautilus had logged 148 hours underway on nuclear power, travelling over 1,000 miles.

Yet to come are deep dives, full power runs and further tests of torpedo armament.

Army's 24-Division Plan Is Replaced By 18, With Only 13 To Be "Mobile"

The Army, which had been planning until the very end of 1954 for an ultimate organization of 24 tactical type divisions in varying states of readiness, will be realigned instead to a structure of 13 mobile, 2 static and 3 training divisions—a total of 18.

First word on the new Army structure came in Secretary Wilson's testimony.

He said the FY '56 budget also will provide for 11 regiments and 136 anti-aircraft battalions.

This compares with present Army strength of 19 combat-type divisions, 12 regiments and 117 anti-aircraft battalions.

It is pertinent to note that two of the divisions, in the present and future program, are what Mr. Wilson describes as "static" units. They are the newly created divisions covering Alaska and the Caribbean, with units widely scattered and one regiment of each division in the U. S.

These two divisions were organized at the end of 1954 by reducing the Army's regiments from 18 to 12.

The Army had announced late last year that it was shooting towards a structure of 24 combat-type divisions, including the present 19 and the five training divisions.

That plan, made public simultaneously with "Operation Gyroscope," has been abandoned.

Army authorities say, however, that "Gyroscope" will not be eliminated by the manpower cut.

Although total division strength will change by a net of only one, from 19 to 18, Army authorities point out that the loss of the six regiments and the requirement for 19 more anti-aircraft battalions, with a drop in manpower from 1,300,000 to 1,027,000 will create formidable problems, given the same global missions now assigned to the Army.

The three training divisions, mentioned by Mr. Wilson in his testimony, are not expected to be comparable to present training divisions.

They will be organized on a combat type T/O&E and will participate in "Gyroscope," so that the identity of the three "training divisions" will change.

Reserve Program Top "Deficiency"

Surveying Defense shortcomings in his appearance before the House Armed Services Committee, Admiral Radford declared "the most important deficiency that must be remedied consists of the serious shortcomings in our Reserve program."

The JCS Chairman said "we must improve the readiness of those forces to meet today's requirements for rapid mobilization."

Secretary Wilson told the legislators that the National Reserve Plan "will do much to correct our present inadequate Reserve situations."

"In its preparation," said Mr. Wilson, "we have carefully considered the views of many interested groups and of all interested agencies of the Government so that we could present to you the best plans possible in view of the problems that must be met."

the Ready Reserve would be obligated to participate in Reserve training as required by the respective Services; they would be liable for service in time of war or emergency declared by the Congress or proclaimed by the President.

"THE NATIONAL GUARD would remain in the Ready Reserve in its traditional role as part of the Nation's first line of defense, retaining its dual State and Federal status. This legislation contains provisions in furtherance of the intent of the Congress that the strength and organization of the National Guard be at all times maintained and assured."

"THE STANDBY RESERVE would be essentially a non-organized reserve manpower pool from which individuals would be drawn to furnish the experienced personnel needed for the secondary phases of a general mobilization. Members of the Standby Reserve would not be required to participate in any training; they would be liable for service only in time of war or emergency declared by the Congress, and their availability for such service would be determined by the Selective Service System."

"There would be a continuous screening of the Ready Reserve and movement of personnel from this group to the Standby Reserve to assure a proper balance of military

ADMIRAL RADFORD STATES "FULL ACCORD"

The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is in "full accord" with the Administration's long-range defense program as presented to Congress.

Admiral Radford made this declaration in his testimony before the Armed Services Committee, which followed a comprehensive review of the program by Secretary Wilson.

Said Admiral Radford:

"For the record, I would like to state that I am in full accord with our long-range defense program as outlined to you by Secretary Wilson this morning in his comprehensive statement. This program, which is by no means inflexible, has evolved over a considerable period of time and after the most searching review of this nation's military requirements for security."

"The review was in effect a military assessment based on national objectives and commitments, the world situation, preparations for the long pull, integration of improved weapons into our strategy and tactics, our manpower limitations, the collective strength of the Free World, a thorough analysis of the existing threat, and a considered estimate of future trends and developments."

skills and to assure that individuals possessing critical civilian skills would not be retained in numbers beyond the military requirements for those skills. First consideration in the transfer of personnel from the Ready Reserve to the Standby Reserve would be given to those who have participated in combat.

"The primary source of personnel for the Reserve Forces would be men leaving the active forces with a remaining obligation to serve in the reserve."

"ALL POSSIBLE administrative measures can and are being taken to improve the Reserve Forces. Primary emphasis will continue to be placed on voluntary participation. However, to the extent that the Reserve Forces are unable to obtain voluntary participation, enforcement measures should be provided by legislation."

"The legislation would also provide authority for the several states to maintain in time of peace, in addition to the National Guard, an organized militia. This would assure continuity of internal security missions and missions in support of civil defense in an emergency where the National Guard was ordered into active Federal service away from the state, particularly in an emergency involving

Here Is How Chiefs View The Program

In what is certainly the most candid expression to Congress in recent years of the absence of unanimity among the Joint Chiefs of Staff regarding budget estimates, Defense Secretary Wilson laid this summation before the House Armed Services Committee:

"... The budget for Fiscal Year 1956 represents the general order of magnitude of the size forces that this country can effectively maintain, can improve on a qualitative basis and that the economy of the country can continue to support."

"We recognize that improvements in organizations and in weapons may make possible certain small savings and adjustments but that our overall strength in the active forces will need to be held to this general level for the next several years."

"As our reserve structures and organizations improve," said Mr. Wilson, "it may be possible at a future date that their contribution will permit further minor adjustments in the active force levels."

"In arriving at the conclusions set forth above, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and all of the military services have been consulted at frequent intervals."

"Their views, while not in all cases unanimous, have been considered by the National Security Council and the President."

"The total personnel strength of the active forces and the target end strength for each service for 30 June 1956 have resulted from these reviews."

"I believe that it is fair to add that the Air Force feels that our defense program is a good one."

"The Navy and the Marine Corps have some minor reservations, and would perhaps like a few additional personnel."

"The Army from its point of view would still recommend some higher strength for the active forces of the Army."

"In my own opinion, the program we have adopted is a sound one."

AF "In Trouble" For Lack Of Housing

"The Air Force is in trouble and behind on the construction of personnel housing and facilities," Secretary Harold E. Talbott told the Armed Services Committee on 27 Jan.

He said that since 1950 the Air Force has placed principal stress on operational facilities and neglected or eliminated adequate housing construction.

Mr. Talbott estimated about 300,000 Air Force families are not properly housed.

On the pay front, Secretary Talbott said "the Services must be competitive with industry." He told the Committee that since 1939 take-home pay of the average airman has gone up only 77 per cent, contrasted with a 168 per cent increase for personnel in the aircraft industry.

"Unless we can make an Air Force career more attractive to our personnel so as to tempt and hold the high quality young men we require to maintain and operate properly our very complicated and costly modern-day aircraft, the efficiency of our readiness force will be jeopardized," Mr. Talbott asserted.

Tells of State Income Taxes For Servicemen

Calling attention to the fact that all members of the Armed Forces are not excused from State and local income taxes, the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts has prepared a compendium of the salient features of the State, Territorial, and insular possessions of the U. S. income tax laws for 1954.

The information is contained in Enclosure One to BuSandA Instruction 5800.6, dated 6 January. The summary gives the amount of income which requires residents of each state to file returns, personal exemptions, the dates returns and payments are due, the title and address of each taxing authority, and the special provisions applicable to members of the Armed Services.

Generally speaking, all persons legally resident or domiciled in a State on the last day of the taxable year are liable to the State's income tax laws, even though they are not physically present throughout the year.

In addition, persons are usually liable for income taxes to the State in which they are living or deriving an income, as well as to the State in which they are legally resident or domiciled, BuSandA says.

However, Section 514 of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940, as amended, provides substantially that a member of the Armed Forces who is legally resident or domiciled in one State and living in another State solely by reason of naval or military duty orders is not liable for income taxes to the State in which he is so living with respect to his service pay.

The Act, on the other hand, BuSandA explains, does not exempt retired or retiree pay, the separate income of a spouse or family of a Serviceman, or the income of a Serviceman derived from a business, investments, rents, and other sources.

Details concerning Federal income-tax laws were published by BuSandA with the approval of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in pamphlet form on 24 Nov. 1954.

bills, Mr. Vinson turned over the pay proposal to Congressman Kilday, who worked on the last two military pay increases. It will be the Chairman's practice to give Committee members the opportunity to introduce bills on which they are especially well-informed or in which they have a particular interest.

Congressman Huddleston is the only new Committee member to serve on the Subcommittee. Congressman Wilson, an avid pay-raise backer in the 83d Congress, has re-introduced a separate cost-of-living pay bill in an effort to stress the need for a military pay raise.

The pay boost, as previously reported in THE JOURNAL, is expected to cost almost $730 million. It increases basic pay in amounts ranging from $7.80 to $145.86, steps up per diem rates from $9 to $12, provides a dislocation allowance and hikes incentive pay for air and sub crews and other hazardous duty assignments.

Chairman Urges Pentagon Apply "Brake" To Manpower Cuts During Rest Of FY '55

Concerned about military manpower cuts due to take place during the next five months, Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee has suggested that Defense Secretary Wilson "put on the brakes for the reduction plan for this fiscal year."

In a letter to the Defense Secretary this week, Congressman Vinson said, "In view of the situation in Formosa, I am inclined at this time to think that we might be unwise in reducing our Armed Forces for the remainder of this fiscal year below the number for which Congress appropriated funds."

He is "concerned," he said, "as to the effect that this reduction may have upon the combat efficiency of our Fleet, the Fleet Marine Forces and our Army."

Mr. Vinson noted that "the Department of Defense convinced Congress last year that it was essential to the defense of the country to maintain an end-strength of 3,032,000 men (30 June 1955)." He asked, "Upon what basis does the Department now find that it was in error in recommending this end strength?"

The Armed Services Chairman said he is "quite sure that the Congress will want considerable justification for the action that you are taking for the remainder of Fiscal 1955."

At the same time, Mr. Vinson said he is inclined to concur with the proposed reductions for fiscal '56. He praised Secretary Wilson for his announced plan to provide "reasonable stability" for the Armed Forces with a floor of 2,850,000 men, and he told the Defense Secretary in a Committee meeting, "The stability of forces you are seeking to bring about is the single most important policy this Nation can adopt."

However, in his letter to Secretary Wilson, Mr. Vinson said it is his candid observation, without knowing all of the facts, "that it might be wise, in common language, to put on the brakes for the reduction plan for this fiscal year."

He said, "The reduction for Fiscal '56 can then proceed in an orderly way with the ultimate objective of a stabilized force of approximately 2,850,000 men for an indefinite period of time and this may be accomplished without disrupting combat effectiveness. In other words, as I see it now, I think we might be wise in spreading out this planned reduction to take effect in Fiscal '56 without accelerating the reduction for the remainder of Fiscal '55."

During hearings this week, Mr. Wilson said he could give no assurance that the Defense Department would be able to get down to the 2,940,000 "target" figure by the end of June.

When the Services took a look at their manpower structure around the first of December, he said, "we thought we could speed up our arrival at a stabilized force and we thought we might as well do it as rapidly as we could." Most of the reductions, which were initially planned for about 40,000 a month, will be made by reducing the number of men brought into service through the draft, he said.

A. P. Photographer Noel Wins Bronze Star Medal

Associated Press photographer Frank Noel was awarded the Bronze Star Medal by Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas on 26 Jan. in a ceremony attended by high-ranking Navy and Marine Corps officials.

Secretary Thomas told the famed photographer "it is uncommon for a civilian to receive a military award such as the Bronze Star Medal but I know of no one, in or out of the service, who more richly deserves this award than you. It will be a fitting tribute to place alongside your 1942 Pulitzer Prize." Mr. Noel was captured in Korea by the Chinese Communists and spent 32 months in prison. "The war you covered in Korea with your camera and your stories, is now almost forgotten amidst other international problems. But we in the Navy and Marine Corps will not forget your heroism," said Secretary Thomas.

"For meritorious service as an Associated Press Photographer, accredited to the First Marine Division, during operations against enemy aggressor forces in Korea on the night of 29-30 November 1950, and subsequently as a Prisoner-of-War in Korea from 30 November 1950 to 5 August 1953. When the convoy in which he was riding was attacked by the enemy on the night of 29 November 1950, Mr. Noel fearlessly exposed himself to intense enemy fire to remove wounded Marines to safe positions and to procure urgently needed ammunition. Captured by the enemy and confined as a prisoner-of-war along with United States Navy, Marine and other friendly personnel, he displayed indomitable courage and resourcefulness in maintaining a high state of morale among the prisoners and in indicating a proper mode of conduct for other captives in the face of the pressures exerted by the enemy to turn the prisoners against their countries. Forced to make two long, arduous marches through the snow-covered mountains during the winter months of 1950-1951, he calmly and resolutely accepted his lot, despite extremely adverse conditions of poor shelter and meager rations, thereby serving as a moral guide to his companions. On another occasion, Mr. Noel, although in a weakened condition, made a determined attempt to escape by swimming a wide body of water. Upon being recaptured, he effectively withstood the enemy's effort to degrade him at

"Short Tours" Set For Officers-EM

About 44,000 Army inductees and 3,400 Reserve lieutenants will be released from active service on an accelerated schedule between now and June.

The Defense Secretary approved the plan this week. It is a result of the cut in Army manpower.

Inductees who complete 23 and 22 months of service in May and June, respectively, will be released during those months.

Also scheduled for early release from service during the period March through June will be approximately 3,400 Reserve lieutenants, mostly ROTC graduates, presently serving their initial obligated 24-month tour of active duty. These officers will be released after completing 21 months of duty.

The Army stressed that the normal 24-months of service for inductees and the 24-month obligated tour of duty for officers will be resumed in June.

Atomic Energy Used To Vulcanize Rubber

The Air Research and Development Command has developed a process of vulcanizing rubber through use of atomic energy.

The new process employs gamma radiation in place of conventional chemical and heat treating methods. Tests show that rubber vulcanized in this manner is equal or superior to that achieved by conventional methods.

By using controlled dosages with the various types of materials subjected to the novel treatment, it was found that fillers and other additive substances used for compounding purposes impart beneficial properties to the cured elastomers.

In general, the intensity of the gamma radiation, from a cobalt 60 source, which is a radioactive form of cobalt, governs the degree of vulcanization in terms of exposure and type of rubber.

Army Promotion Prospects Outlined

Here's a quick rundown on Army temporary promotion probabilities for the next several months.

TO COLONEL: Preparations were being completed as THE JOURNAL went to press for release of about 150 promotions to temporary colonel. The next increment after that probably will not be until March.

TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL: Definite plans cannot be set until end-of-the-month strength figures are analyzed, but it appears there may be some promotions to temporary lieutenant colonel in February or March.

TO MAJOR: First temporary promotions to major from new selection board action are likely for March, although a slight chance exists that these will be made in late February.

TO CAPTAIN: The picture is the same as that for promotion to major.

Army Pistol Team Preps For Tampa Contest

Nearly 60 candidates for the U.S. Army Pistol Team which will compete in the National Mid-Winter Pistol Matches at Tampa, Fla., will assemble at Ft. Benning, Ga., 6 Feb. to begin preparations for the annual event.

Tryouts will start 8 Feb. after a two-day orientation. A series of elimination matches is scheduled to trim the squad to match size for the mid-winter competition 8-12 March.

Maj. Frank Graham, USA, who is expected to captain the team, said the final aggregation will be comprised of 18 experts.

Brig. Gen. Walter Takes Command of KCAC

Brig. Gen. Mercer C. Walter, USA, a combat veteran of WW II, has assumed command of the Korea Civil Assistance Command in Seoul.

General Walter succeeds Brig. Gen. F. L. Hayden, USA, who had commanded the organization since Feb. 1954. General Hayden's new assignment has not been announced.

His new position will give General Walter supervision of the vast relief and rehabilitation program assigned to KCAC, in helping the Korean people rebuild their nation (see ANAF JOURNAL 18 Dec. '54). Under his command will be civilian and military specialists in all fields of social welfare, engineering, transportation, medicine and supply. Working with materials purchased by funds allotted directly to KCAC as well as those of the Foreign Operations Administration, UNKRA and other agencies, the organization fills a vital place in the Korean economy.

Col. William A. Cauthen has been transferred from the Korea Civil Assistance Command to the 1242d SU, New York National Guard Advisor Group.

New Job For Col. Collins

Col. Glenn J. Collins, MC, USA, formerly Chief, Surgical Research Branch, Research and Development Division, Office of the Army-Surgeon General, has been appointed Assistant Chief of the Research and Development Division.

Colonel Collins and his wife reside at 123 Whitmoor Terrace, Silver Spring, Md.

FRANK H. HIGGINS, Assistant Secretary of the Army (center), visits Redstone Arsenal, Ala., for a conference on rockets and guided missiles. With him are Brig. Gen. H. N. Tofrey, Arsenal Commander (left), and Maj. Gen. Leslie E. Simon, Chief of the Research and Development Division in the Chief of Ordnance's Office.

Former Navy Cdr. Charles C. Finucane Will Be Under Secretary Of The Army

Assistant Army Secretary Charles C. Finucane—a WW II Naval officer—has been named by President Eisenhower to succeed Under Secretary of the Army John Slezak.

Named Assistant Secretary for Financial Management last August, Mr. Finucane during recent months has spent a considerable amount of time visiting Army installations throughout the country to get a first-hand picture of management problems.

The 49-year-old native of Spokane,

Wash., was commissioned as an Ensign in the Naval Reserve in 1934 and went on active duty in June 1941.

He served during the War with the Northwest Sea Frontier and with the BuOrd in Washington, D. C., leaving active service in the rank of commander.

The Army reorganization plan has vested greatly increased authority and responsibility in the Under Secretary's office.

Mr. Slezak is leaving Government service to return to private industry.

ARMY SECRETARY VIEWS "RESPONSIBILITY"

ARMY Secretary Robert T. Stevens, in a speech before the National Security Industrial Association in New York City on 20 Jan., prefaced a review of two years' accomplishment with a statement of his views on responsibility for Army successes and failures.

Said the Secretary:

"In referring to the accomplishments of the past two years, I would not have you think for one moment that everything has been on the plus side of the ledger. In handling an establishment as big as the United States Army it is inescapable that some errors will be made and I, as Secretary of the Army, fully realize that I am the responsible person for the items on both sides of the ledger. I want you to know that I fully accept that responsibility and have never hesitated to admit when mistakes have been made and have vigorously initiated prompt remedial action.

"Learning by experience is many times painful. We of the Army do not claim perfection because, after all, the Army is made up of human beings, our nation's most valuable resources, and I need not remind you that human beings are not infallible. The important thing in the administration of an establishment as large as ours is to admit mistakes and take the necessary steps to make sure that there is no recurrence.

Concluding his address, Mr. Stevens said:

"I am proud of the many solid accomplishments of the Army during the last two years. The lion's share of the credit belongs to our military personnel. We civilians can set the standards, but it is the military who put them into effect. Our distinguished Chief of Staff, General Ridgway, who is the operating head of the Army, and our senior military commanders have played a large part in shaping our programs, and have carried them out with zeal, imagination, and ability. After thirty-odd years in business, I can say with deep sincerity that the capabilities of our military leaders are equal in all respects to those of our business leaders."

ComZ's 64th Med. Gp. Gets Battle Streamers

The 64th Medical Group was honored at Orleans, France, 20 Jan. for its WW II combat record in Europe.

At a retreat parade, Maj. Gen. P. E. Gallagher, Com Z CG, pinned five battle streamers on the regimental flag of the Group, for action during the Normandie, Northern France, the Rhineland, Ardennes Alsace, and Central Europe campaigns in 1944 and 1945. The award was authorized by the Department of the Army. The group is commanded by Lt. Col. Richard H. Ross.

An important announcement from General Motors to America's Aviation Industry and all who travel by air

It has always been the aim of General Motors to supply America with the most efficient and dependable motive power for all types of transportation.

In motor vehicles, in locomotives and in many types of work and pleasure boats, GM gasoline and Diesel engines have long enjoyed the confidence of millions of people who depend upon them in their daily travels.

Now General Motors is introducing to commercial aviation a new American-designed power plant and propeller which promise the same long step forward in passenger travel by air that GM has provided in other forms of mass transportation.

This new power plant is the Model 501 Turbo-Prop engine with matched Aero-products propeller, both produced by our Allison Division.

Behind each of them stand thousands of hours of military experience which has advanced engine and propeller development to a point of readiness for the passenger-flying public. This is a classic example of the benefits to the nation and the public which result from close cooperation between the Armed Forces and American industry.

Turbo-Prop power means a gas turbine engine similar to a jet, but with its tremendous power harnessed to turn a propeller.

The big advantage of the Turbo-Prop engine is that it uses less fuel than a jet, yet it enables aircraft to travel faster with greater payload than any other propeller-type engine.

The Allison Model 501 is the most efficient Turbo-Prop engine for its size and weight ever built in this country or abroad. It delivers more power than piston engines of twice its weight.

It incorporates all the knowledge that Allison has gained in building gas turbine engines that have flown more than five million hours — more flight experience than has been accumulated by any other turbine engine manufacturer — experience in the air where it counts most.

The military versions of the Allison Turbo-Prop already power eight different types of Navy and Air Force aircraft, including the new Vertical Take-Off Interceptors.

Now being readied for commercial use, the Allison Turbo-Prop will enable America's airlines to carry heavier payloads, maintain faster schedules, use shorter runways, and to offer passengers a far smoother, quieter, more comfortable ride.

While this Allison Model 501 engine can be installed in today's airplanes, the aircraft industry is busy designing new airframes to take fullest advantage of its performance.

General Motors is proud that its wide experience in engine design is paying off in this important contribution to the progress of American-built-and-powered aircraft for both military and commercial service.

Promotion Exam Areas Of Study Outlined For Temporary And Reserve Officers

The Navy, in line with its decision to reinstate officer promotion examinations, has issued detailed study plans for Temporary and Reserve officers.

BuPers Instruction 1416.3, and its five enclosures, applies to all officers temporarily appointed in the grade of ensign and above whose permanent status is warrant or enlisted, with the exception of those in the Medical Service Corps. A study plan for MSC officers will be promulgated by the Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery at a later date.

The study plan for Reserve officers, outlined in BuPers Instruction 1416.4, with 17 enclosures, is applicable to all Naval Reserve officers except those in the Medical Corps, Medical Service Corps, Dental Corps, and Nurse Corps. Professional requirements for the Staff Corps also will be issued by BuMed. In addition, requirements for promotion of Reserve warrant officers will be the subject of a future BuPers directive.

Both Temporary and Reserve officers will be required to demonstrate their professional qualifications, either by completion of examinations or by progressive study, in the following three broad areas:

EXECUTIVE In this area, all officers will be required to have an understanding of the basic principles and policies in the organization of the Defense Department and in the planning, control, and administration of the Naval Establishment.

OPERATIONS Officers must demonstrate knowledge of the professional sub-USMCR (W) Celebrates 12th Birthday on 13 Feb.

The Women Marine's Reserve Corps will celebrate its 12th Anniversary on 13 February.

Historically, the formation of the Corps dates back to 1943 when the first handful of Women Marines reported to Hunter College, New York, for training. Prior to that time, some 300 women had served as "Marinettes" in Washington during WWI.

During WWII, the Lady Leathernecks relieved men for combat duty, serving in such varied assignments as typists, Link-trainer instructors and aviation control tower operators.

Jt. Landing Force Board Ends Operation on 1 Feb.

The Joint Landing Force Board, headed by Maj. Gen. Alfred H. Noble, USMC, Commanding General, MCB, Camp Lejeune, N. C., will be disestablished on 1 February.

All projects currently under study by the Board, composed of 21 officers and 17 enlisted men from the combined services, will be taken over by the Marine Corps Development Center, Quantico, Va., on that date.

As one of the six joint boards authorized by the Joint Chiefs of Staff in July 1952, the JLFB's mission was the development of tactics, techniques, and equipment of landing forces for use in joint amphibious operations.

During its operation, 29 formal and 27 informal projects were before the Board for deliberation. Probably the most outstanding technique studied and formulated into Marine Corps policy is the helicopter concept of airborne assault. Published as a Joint Service Agreement under the title Vertical Envelopment by Helicopter, the plan of delivering Marines in action received its test under fire during the Korean War.

Capt. Jack Lewis, USMCR, Writes "Chase" Novel

"Rogue Hunt," a novel by Capt. Jack Lewis, USMCR, Informational Services Officer, MCAS, Kaneohe Bay, T. H., is scheduled for publication by Shasta Publishers, Chicago, Ill.

Captain Lewis, who began his second tour of duty in Korea in 1952, has been working on the book for almost two years. The novel, he says, deals with "a hunt through South America for the last of the uncaptured major Nazi war criminals, who has now taken sides with the Communist forces."

After being released to inactive duty in June, he plans to remain in Hawaii, working in the public relations and motion picture fields.

Maj. Gen. Good Slated To Command Pendleton

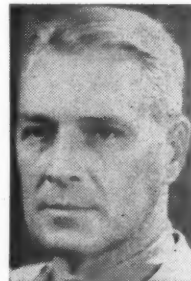

Maj. Gen. George F. Good, jr., USMC, Deputy Commander, MCB, Camp Pendleton, will assume command of the Base upon the retirement of Maj. Gen. John T. Selden, USMC, who will end a 40 year career in April.

General Good, a 1923 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, is a two-time winner of the Legion of Merit during WW II. He was awarded his first by the Army for outstanding service as Island Commander, Funafuti, Ellice Islands. There, in face of a threatened Japanese invasion, he led his command in establishing a strong defense unit to cover the construction of a landing field.

He won his second as Chief of Staff of the 2d Marine Division during the mop-up operations on Saipan, followed by the Okinawa campaign and the occupation of Japan.

He was Commanding General of the 2d Division at Camp Lejeune from June 1953 until July 1954, when he assumed his present duties.

General Good and his wife, the former Jessie Garrison, daughter of the late Captain D. M. Garrison, USN-Ret., have two sons, Capt. George F. Good, III, USMC, and Lee J. Good. Their daughter is married to Maj. H. W. Card, USMC.

New Review Course At Air Med. School

A four-week Review Course in aeromedical procedures has been established at the School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Texas.

The course, whose first enrollment consists of 22 high-ranking medical officers, restates the basic principles and concepts of aeromedicine. It is designed for flight surgeons who have several years of practice in the field, and also assists selected medical officers in preparing for examinations leading to certification in the aviation medicine specialty.

The new course reflects the continued wide-spread growth and importance of aviation medicine, which was recognized in 1953 by the American Medical Association as a new and distinct branch of the medical sciences. Officers attending the course are:

Col. Raymond A. Lawn, Col. Fred A. Heimstra, Lt. Col. N. Robert Drummond and Lt. Col. Bradley W. Prior, all with the Air Training Command.

Representing the Tactical Air Command are Col. Raymond T. Jenkins, Col. Nicholas F. Atria, Col. Oliver H. Waltrip, Lt. Col. George H. Goder, Lt. Col. Joseph A. Connor, Jr., and Maj. Frederick S. Spiegel.

Other commands and their representatives are: Strategic Air Command, Col. Albert W. Van Sickle, Col. George F. Brier, III, Lt. Col. Robert H. Brooks, Lt. Col. Courand H. Rothe; Air Materiel Command, Col. William H. McCarroll, Col. Lindsay J. Ervin; Air University, Col. Emmert C. Lentz; Air Defense Command, Col. Clarence A. Tinsman; Headquarters USAF, Lt. Col. Hamilton B. Webb.

The single representative of the Navy is Cdr. William M. Snowden, who is attached to the Naval Medical School, Bethesda, Md.

USAFE to Build Two Hotels in Wiesbaden

Two new hotels will be built in Wiesbaden, Germany, for the use of American personnel, it has been announced by Hq., U. S. Air Forces Europe whose headquarters is located in that city.

The hotels will be built with Deutsche-marks from German occupation funds. Contracts are being let by the German government.

One will be a 7-story 200-room hotel for transient officers and civilians. Construction will begin 1 April on what is now the soccer field opposite the intersection of Rhine Strasse and Wilhelmstrasse.

The other will be a 9-story structure with 400 rooms for women officers and Department of the Air Force women civilians. Construction is also expected to begin about 1 April. It will be built opposite the 7100th USAF Hospital.

Completion of these are expected to facilitate the return of present requisitioned hotels to German ownership.

Maj. Gen. Landry, Former President's Aide, Assumes Command of Fourth Air Force

Maj. Gen. Robert B. Landry, USAF, takes command of ConAC's 4th Air Force at Hamilton AFB, California, on 1 Feb.

Credited with over 5,000 flying hours, General Landry reached his present rank on 8 March 1952 at the age of 43, having been appointed Brigadier General in 1948.

A 1932 graduate of West Point, he served as commanding officer of an infantry company until 1934 when he entered pilot training.

General Landry was assigned to the post of Operations Officer and Flying Aide to the Commanding General, Hawaiian Air Force, in 1940, and was serving in that capacity when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. He subsequently was named Executive Officer of the Hawaiian Interceptor Command at Honolulu.

During the build-up days of the Eighth Air Force, General Landry was transferred to England. His first assignment there was Chief of Combat Operations of the 8th Fighter Command.

Later assignments in that area included Commanding Officer, 56th Fighter Group; Director of Fighters, Eighth Air Force; Executive Officer 93d Combat Wing; and Commanding Officer, 493d Bombardment Group, Medium. He later became Director of Operations, Air Staff, SHAEF, at Frankfurt, Germany.

A year of service on the Army-Navy-Air Force Review Board was followed by appointment to the Staff and Faculty of the National War College.

From 1948 to 1953, General Landry was Air Force Aide to President Truman.

In 1953, General Landry became Deputy Commander of the Second Air Force, Barksdale AFB, La.

General Landry's favorite form of recreation is golf. He consistently shoots in the mid-70's.

These courses are especially designed for airmen working toward an AFSC in electronics. In order to take the radio repairman course the student must either have completed a military or civilian course in radio, theory, hold a commercial or amateur Class A or B license, have had two years of full-time experience as a military or civilian radio repairman, or have successfully completed the ECI course, Radio Fundamentals.

In order to take the second course the student must have completed the ECI course, Airman Electronics Fundamentals, or have equivalent training and experience.

JCC Opens National Drive to Aid Air Force

Opening a nation-wide program sponsored by the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce to increase the American public's understanding of the Air Force, Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Charles I. Carpenter, Chief Chaplain of the Air Force, spoke 23 Jan. in Dayton, Ohio, at an interfaith religious music festival. General Thomas D. White, Vice Chief of Staff, spoke the next day in the Dayton Biltmore Hotel before 800 guests.

Junior Chamber of Commerce chapters in about 500 cities will participate in this major mission in public and Air Force relations. Jaycee chapters in each city will some time during 1955 conduct an Air Force week or month similar to that in Dayton, where Mayor Henry S. Stout declared the week of 23 through 30 Jan. as "Operation Top Flight Week."

Monday morning Daytonians found their city in holiday dress. Besides flags and bunting along the streets, 30 colorful displays were featured. The B-50 bomber "Lucky Lady" which flew non-stop around the world was on view, as were F-84 and F-86 jet fighters, all in downtown locations. Department store windows and banks showed moving jet engines, aircraft models, Air Force training equipment, and special clothing.

Hold General Ridgway. The Administration's decision to retain General Matthew B. Ridgway on active duty beyond the end of March, when he otherwise would have been retired, is one that will be welcomed by the Service and the country. These are vital times for the Army and it needs his wide experience and his firm, though restrained, leadership in the Appropriation presentations soon to be made to Congress.

One would normally assume that the Administration intends to keep General Ridgway as Chief of Staff of the Army. His nomination, alone of the Service Chiefs, specified no fixed number of years, so he would be eligible to stay on for the statutory four-year term. However, even if he is not kept in that post for the full four years, the government should still make use of his services. General J. Lawton Collins, his predecessor as Chief of Staff, is still on active duty and has performed valuable services, both with NATO and in his recently completed trip to Indochina.

General Ridgway's past service as Supreme Commander of Allied Powers, both in the Far East and in Europe, gives him a background of experience too valuable to be lost to the United States at this time.

Lead From Strength. The promptness and near unanimity with which Congress put itself on record in support of President Eisenhower's stand in the Far East gives our new policy a strength and backing that leaves the Communist world in little doubt as to the firmness of our purpose. They know now that we are committed to action if their aggression extends to Formosa or the Pescadores.

The Free World—and the Communists, too, if they would admit it—recognize that our purpose is to preserve the peace. There can be no war unless Red China or her Soviet backers will it. Our powerful Seventh Fleet and our Air Force bombers will take no offensive action unless the Reds make the first move.

But strong words and a firm stand must be backed by armed might now and in the future. Therefore, the defense budget which Congress will soon begin considering will be a critical one and the action they take upon it will be a gauge to the rest of the world of the strength of our determination to carry out the new policy. To reduce our forces in the face of our present declaration would be folly, indeed.

How Close the Race? It is gratifying that the new Budget estimates call for a modest increase in appropriations for the operation of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. Last year and for the current year, Congress held this vital research organization to $52,000,000. Now the Budget Bureau asks for $63,500,000.

If Congress carries through and appropriates this sum (in previous years it has made cuts in the NACA's budget) it would put an end to the "leveling off" process which has been going on for three years. As Dr. Jerome C. Hunsaker, NACA Chairman, states in the annual report released this week, "The current trend toward leveling off expenditures for scientific research in aeronautics is forcing hard decisions to slow down or to defer indefinitely research projects essential to the timely development of new weapons. It is now wise to accelerate scientific progress. In the long run, scientific research is the best insurance that there will be 'value received' from the country's whole aircraft program."

Present estimates look toward the expenditure next year of a total of $8,225,000,000 for aircraft and guided missiles. Yet the NACA will be permitted, at the most, less than eight-tenths of one per cent of that sum to carry on its scientific laboratory research and to coordinate aeronautical research carried on in the United States. This seems a paltry sum to devote to the stockpiling of research results and engineering data upon which the future of our defense in the air depends.

Dr. Hunsaker points out that we are in a race to acquire the scientific knowledge necessary to create airplanes and missiles capable of traveling at extreme altitudes across intercontinental distances and with supersonic swiftness. We know, he says, that Russian technical air progress is "challenging." As Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, Ret., told the officers at the Air Research and Development Command, this week; "Our position of military superiority, over the long haul, depends, primarily, on the full exploitation of our science and technology."

It is important to our future not only that Congress give the NACA the full total of its estimates this year, but that it agree that larger sums be devoted to this purpose in the future.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—President Roosevelt nominated H. Struve Hensel, general counsel of the Navy, to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy, succeeding Ralph A. Bard who was promoted to Under Secretary. Mr. Hensel came to Washington four years ago expecting to stay only a few months.

50 Years Ago—The Navy Department is face to face with the serious problem of desertions. In three months of last Fall, during which the ships of the North Atlantic Fleet were in dock at the several navy yards, more than 500 men deserted. In the case of one battleship more than 100 men deserted.

90 Years Ago—The subject of a pay increase for officers of the Army has been undergoing discussion for several months, yet it does not appear that members of Congress have been fully convinced of either its necessity or justice. One argument used in opposition is that, if the pay of officers is increased, that of enlisted men must also be increased, and then, proceeding upon this hypothesis, is it said "that the Government cannot stand it." The Government is truly in a deplorable position if it cannot afford to pay men qualified to discharge the duties of high and responsible positions, salaries commensurate with the services rendered.

Retired Pay

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

We have read with interest your lead editorial, "The New Paybill," in 22 Jan. issue.

Your comments anent the plight of officers retired for physical disability prior to the 1949 Act, and who elected to draw retirement pay under the older provisions, are timely.

Mostly with less than 26 years service, the '49 Act would, actually, have reduced their retirement pay!

Under the NEW, 1955 proposed bill, those officers may again make a selection—to what avail? In most cases, they would again lose money—yet, if they stay under the old provisions they would be denied any pay increases, just as they lost out under the Career Compensation Act of 1949! Why?

Other categories (Regulars) would benefit under the new Act, as proposed.

Non-regular retired officers, retired P. D., prior to 1949 have needs at least equal to those of other categories. Why should writers of such bills seemingly discriminate against Reserve retired officers? Why is it that such bills are not written to deal with all in the same manner? Why is it that there so often appears to be some snafu to discriminate versus the "Minute Men," who always are called upon in time of a shooting war to rush in and help "save the country—and the world" and then bear the brunt of shabby treatment?

Surely this phase of the measure needs suitable, impartial correction!

RETIRED,
DISABLED RESERVE OFFICER

Loss In Retired Pay

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It was most gratifying to read your editorial in THE JOURNAL of 22 Jan. pointing out the inequities of the 1949 Career Compensation Act and the proposed Career Incentive Act with respect to personnel retired for physical disability prior to the 1949 Act.

I have always considered that persons retired for disability were treated most fairly prior to the 1949 Act. If they received too liberal treatment apparently Congress and the Armed Services administering the statutes considered it to be deserving at that time.

I can understand that personnel who are retired for disability under the 1949 Act on a Veterans Administration percentage of disability scale, lost advantages under prior retirement statutes and are therefore entitled to pay increases to compensate for this loss, which perhaps should not accrue to persons who were retired prior to the 1949 Act.

On the other hand all persons who retired prior to the 1949 Act had the same physical disability rights. Nevertheless those who were retired for reasons other than disability will receive all of the pay increases under the new acts whereas those retired for disability receive none. The increase lost in my case amounts to 37% of my retired pay. This is inequitable.

Furthermore, it is now proposed to exempt a percentage of all retirement pay from income taxation, which will benefit persons retired for reasons other than disability without any corresponding benefit to those retired for disability.

Your continued efforts in behalf of physically retired personnel will be appreciated.

Army Promotion

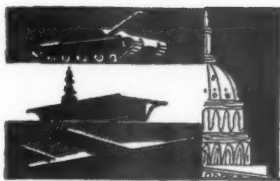

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Undoubtedly, Army promotions are a primary subject of letters to the editor—guess one more will neither solve nor hurt the problem! However, the particular gripe I cite is that the major change in Army temporary promotion policy since World War II seems about to hit some of us unjustly for the second time. This policy change—the use of temporary dates of rank as the primary criteria for zones of consideration for further temporary promotion—was made presumably because WW II temporary rank was the best available reflection of officer experience and achievement. Many of us promoted to Lieutenant Colonel in 1950 on the basis of permanent rank would have been promoted on the first or at least very early lists had the criteria been temporary date of rank rather than promotion list number. Not only did arbitrary changes in relative rank result, but the several thousand temporary files lost by this change very likely will mean several additional years in grade before even reaching the zone of consideration for temporary promotion to full colonel. This situation is a tough one to accept happily as a result of just policy—something should be done about it. In addition to this objection, many of us affected were involved in reduction, "without prejudice," it said, from temporary lieutenant colonel after WW II.

It is recognized that the reduced army after WW II required grade adjustment and promotion policy actions which were bound to hurt some people—if either the permanent list or temporary list were used. It's the change since, from one basis to another which hurts—and may continue to hurt. However, as long as temporary rank achieved in WW II has been accepted as the primary criteria for zones of consideration, corrective action should be taken whereby officers promoted temporarily in 1950 on the basis of permanent rank be given revised dates of rank in keeping with their temporary dates of rank in their former grade. This revision of date should be at least furnished to and used by selection boards as the determinant for zones of consideration and order of precedence when the lieutenant colonels promoted in 1950 began to be considered for promotion to full colonel.

AIRCRAFT CARRIERS are the backbone of our strategic sea defense and attack force, Rep. Thomas M. Pelly (R-Wash.), says. Taking exception to Rep. Clarence Cannon's (D-Mo) statement last week that funds should not be appropriated for another supercarrier, Mr. Pelly said he hopes the Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee "will not close his mind to recommendations of our best military brains." He added, "If you scuttle this carrier program, you scuttle the Navy. Moscow and Peiping would like that. Those are the only authorities I know of who want our aircraft carriers scuttled."

MALE NURSES are back in the news. Rep. Frances P. Bolton (R-Ohio) has reintroduced her bill to authorize the armed services to recognize the professional status of men who are registered nurses, by giving them Reserve commissions. Such commissions, Mrs. Bolton says, "would grant proper recognition to these men and would strongly influence more well-qualified men to enroll in schools of nursing. It would also free many women nurses to remain in civilian hospitals."

PROMOTION of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur to be a General of the Armies is gaining support. Former Speaker Joe Martin (R-Mass.), Rep. Patrick J. Hillings (R-Calif.), Rep. Frank W. Boykin (D-Ala.), Rep. Francis E. Dorn (R-NY), and Senator Herman Welker (R-Idaho) have joined with Rep. Usher L. Burdick (R-ND) in sponsoring legislation to give new rank to the five-star general on his 75th birthday, 26 Jan.

OBJECTIONS are sure to be raised over the President's proposed cuts in Army strength, according to Rep. Usher L. Burdick (R-ND). The amount provided in the budget for national security "may have to be increased," he says, "because our security depends upon how well we ourselves are prepared to defend this country. In my judgment we have neglected ourselves too much, because we are just waking up to the fact that in the final analysis we shall have to do our own defending."

CHAIRMAN CARL VINSON (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee has served notice that he "will not knowingly slight the clear requirements of our Defense, just for the sake of economy." He made the statement at the Committee's first meeting this week. "The International situation which confronts the Nation today, and the very measure of this Committee's jurisdiction," he said, "places a very heavy and serious responsibility on every member of the Committee. There must be no hesitancy on the part of the members of this Committee in meeting that responsibility." He told the members "there is no room for narrow or partisan consideration" on the Committee; "Our sole objective is the maintenance of the highest possible level of national defense, consistent with national solvency."

FORMER CHAIRMAN DEWEY SHORT (R-Mo) received high praise from Congressman Vinson. The new Chairman said the House Armed Services Committee "made a truly magnificent record" in the 83d Congress "and it was due in a very large measure to the outstanding leadership and human qualities of Mr. Short." He added, "I hope that in some degree I might approach that record because it was one in which every member could take pride."

TWO RETIRED GENERALS will join Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, former Commander of the Sixth Army, at the Justice Department, if the Congress approves recommendations made by Attorney General Brownell. The Attorney General is urging legislation which will permit him to appoint Maj. Gen. Frank H. Partridge, USA-Ret., as Assistant Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service to head the Border Patrol, Detention and Deportation Division, and Brig. Gen. Edwin B. Howard, USA-Ret., as Assistant Commissioner in charge of the Field Inspections and Security Division. General Partridge, who was recommended but not confirmed for the job during the 83d Congress, is General Swing's former Deputy at Sixth Army. General Howard is former Chief of Intelligence for Allied Land Forces, Central Europe. Special legislation is required to permit the two officers to draw salaries from the Justice Department in lieu of their retired pay.

COMMENT ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS Plain Words For Red China's Attention

THE President's definition of a clear policy with regard to full protection of Formosa and the Pescadores, also requiring that we "take into account closely related localities and actions," was intended for all ears—of those at home who have been confused about American intentions, of those in allied and neutral nations who naturally look to America for leadership of the free world, and of those in Red China who have been testing us out for months to see how far America can be pushed. They now know, in particular Chou En-lai, who in the taking of Yikiang proclaimed that this was a part of the ultimate plan for "liberating" Formosa.

Chou En-lai can think that over. The Reds presumably will be allowed to take the Tachen islands, for the American program indicates that the U. S. Seventh Fleet will be instructed to evacuate from the Tachens our own valuable radar, weapons, and other equipment, and the 20,000-man garrison of Nationalist Chinese. Since 1948 they have dug themselves in so securely that they could have put up a lively defense against anything but a really determined Red attack.

NAVAL OFFICERS, in a good many cases, have expressed opposition to any withdrawal at all from the coastal islands, feeling that Communism must not be allowed to advance one inch, on the reasoning that Communism, particularly in Asia, feeds on these territorial gains at the expense (even though psychological only) of the western and other anti-Red nations. There was a strong naval view that the Seventh Fleet's might could profitably have been used, not in extricating Nationalist Chinese from the Tachens, but in helping them to stay there.

Had that support been extended, it would have called for operations of an extremely serious nature. The Tachens are close to Red China. The Red forces which would be used to occupy them inevitably would have come from the mainland, whether one speaks of aerial assault forces (presumably based in large part on Hangchow) or surface vessels (probably coming down from Ningpo or Shanghai), or submarines ("loaned" by Russia, which has a good many submarines in the neighborhood). It is most unlikely that, with forces actively engaged, Seventh Fleet operations could have been restricted permanently to the Tachens, without access to the bases from which the Red opponents come. To bar Vice Admiral Pride's forces from the really effective destruction of the enemy at his strongpoints would be unrealistic. Not to bar him would certainly have meant war of a very real sort.

OUR FAR EAST POLICY, like our policy elsewhere, is to maintain peace, and an activity clearly certain to bring on war has to be closely appraised, to see whether it is a justifiable cause of a major war. In this case the appraisal was made, and before it was too late. The decision was that, while we must be ready to make war in defense of the peace, the making of war must not be lightly undertaken.

The Navy's original view that the Tachens are of value to Chiang is unaltered. Two hundred miles north of Formosa, their radar station alone would have been of great value in detecting the approach of surface invasion vessels from the Ningpo-Shanghai area, and the passage of planes from the Hangchow airfield or such others as may be built near the coast of Chekiang, opposite the Tachens. The well protected underground posts could have maintained Chiang's forces for a considerable time, for use not only in purely defensive actions but in small raids and in persistent interference with Red traffic. Nevertheless a determined assault would have overrun even these posts.

OTHER CONSIDERATIONS entered our calculations. They are related to the long-range policy of maintaining peace wherever possible. Our desire to bring about a peace in the China Sea is not our own alone; a large part of the free world is just as anxious to achieve it, and there already is a movement within the United Nations to arrange a cease-fire status and thereafter effect a peace by adopting Formosa as a UN ward, thereby affording Red China and Formosa alike security against the long-threatened invasions by one or the other.

Our defense of Formosa itself is not in doubt. It has been pledged, and the pledge will be kept. There can be no thought of letting the Red savages loose on the island occupied by the Reds' most consistent foes. That is an unquestioned obligation to the remnants of Chiang Kai-shek's following.

WE ALSO have an obligation to our own security. A mere glance at the map must show that the western world cannot permit the strategically situated Formosa to pass into Red hands. Nor can the Philippines. It need not be in our possession, but its neutrality is essential, and a UN guardianship has much to commend it. Significantly, this is something which Red China and Red Russia will oppose.

All this lies ahead. The matter of immediate concern is the evacuation of the Tachens, toward which Vice Admiral Pride began moving even before the President's message went to the Congress. The Seventh Fleet's ability to carry out that mission is not in question. The unknown factor is the behavior of Red China, some of whose warriors are not noted for their calm judgment. If the evacuation is interrupted by serious injury to one of our naval vessels, the consequences can be grave.

It is doubtful that Red China would welcome those consequences, or indeed deliberately risk anything like a major war, for which that country is not ready. There are exacting internal requirements. There is a food shortage, accentuated by the heavy export of food in exchange for manufactured goods which Peiping wishes. The difficulties and costs of conducting a considerable war are great, and must be recognized by even the most confident of Peiping's chiefs. Nevertheless, the decision is still Red China's, and we cannot lose sight of that all-important fact.

THE PHILIPPINES, whose government must be watching the China Sea controversy with anxiety, this week took possession of the first of those six $1,000,000 patrol vessels (new) which we are committed to supplying. They are designed for defensive patrol, but they are important, being the largest war vessels in Manila's protective possession. This week's delivery constitutes a step in the implementing of our aid agreement and an encouragement (if that be necessary) to President Mag-saysay, a potent friend of the United States and a prime mover in the South-East Asia Pact, of which we will be hearing a good deal more a month hence when its delegates gather at Bangkok.

MOSCOW, determined to do all in its power to block ratification of the Paris and London pacts for rearming West Germany and admitting her to full membership in NATO, on Tuesday surprised even the most cocksure political prophets by abruptly ending Russia's state of war with Germany—not with East Germany alone, but with Germany as a unit. The aim of course is to convince a majority of the Bonn parliament that ratification of the Nine-Power pacts will be neither necessary or desirable for Germany.

It is the boldest effort Moscow has yet made, but the purpose is so readily discernible and the ultimate peril so poorly hidden, and the whole one-week enterprise in such conflict with a nine-year reality affecting both Germany and helpless Austria, that Moscow's effort seems likely to deceive only those German legislators who insist upon being deceived. How many of that variety there are at Bonn will be revealed in the ensuing debate.

MEMO For Journal Readers

A $1,750,000,000 QUESTION is going to create recurring difficulties on Capitol Hill in the next few months. Trouble started this week when House Armed Services Committee members energetically questioned Secretary Wilson about the "built in" fiscal fantasy.

THE DEFENSE DEPT. PROGRAM in the FY '56 budget actually would require expenditure of a total of $35.75 billion for full performance of all approved projects, but only $34 billion will be spent, according to the same budget. Just two weeks ago, the Pentagon's dollar wizard, Asst. SecDef. W. J. McNeil, carefully explained to newsmen that the $1.75 billion differential is accounted for by the fact, shown in past experience, that not all programs are executed as planned. For example, the differential will be about $3 billion this year.

MR. McNEIL DENIED any relationship between the unprecedented '56 defense budget accounting and the deficit in the overall Federal Budget. He said it was strictly a Defense Dept. decision and that members of Congress, who were consulted, agreed it was a good idea. Mr. McNeil maintained emphatically that the $34 billion figure was definitely not a spending ceiling.

BUDGET BUREAU IMPLICATION in the accounting scheme, however, was forthcoming from Mr. McNeil's boss, SecDef Wilson, who is also no mean hand at explaining defense obligations and expenditures, "give or take a billion." Under stiff questioning in the Armed Services Committee, he said at one point he didn't know where the $1.75 billion reduction would come from exactly, "but we will do it." He conceded that that was what the Budget Bureau wanted.

THERE'S NO DOUBT Mr. Wilson, Mr. McNeil and other Defense officials will be pressed for a comprehensive explanation of the accounting procedure in their appearances before the Appropriations Committees of the Senate and House, notwithstanding the advance liaison work.

THE CONTRIVED CALCULATION of $1.75 billion is merely about $750 million more than the entire national defense budget in 1938. In that year, the Army asked boldly for $416 million; the Navy wanted $562 million; there was no Air Force.

SKI-CAPS FOR SAILORS is under Navy consideration. The New York Purchasing Office is looking into possible use of a Navy-blue, soft-visored, soft-crowned ski-type cap for use with the working uniform.

THE FORMOSA SITUATION, with the rapid deployment of naval strength, will give Navy leaders powerful ammunition in their budget testimony on the Hill. The stress that Navy chiefs have been placing on mobility and flexibility of carrier task forces can be documented in the Seventh Fleet.

PENTAGON CONCERN is growing that extension of the Doctor Draft Act and the new Family Medical Care plan will become entangled during forthcoming Capitol hearings. Service officials are worried that the American Medical Assn. may renew previous attacks on dependent care, asserting that if the Services reduced dependent care, drafting of doctors might not be necessary. During recent years, the A.M.A. is known to have asked doctors leaving the Service to report on how much of their time was spent in caring for dependents.

A GUIDED MISSILE REPORT demanded by the Senate Appropriations Committee last June has gotten off the mark at the Pentagon. The Committee asked the Defense Dept. to report no later than 15 Jan. on missile progress in all the Services, with emphasis on action being taken to avoid unnecessary rivalry and duplication.

SECDEF WILSON named a high-level committee to conduct an inquiry and prepare a report. But the 15 Jan. target has been missed. The Senate Committee was still waiting for the report this week.

THE UPWARD SPURT in Army enlistments during January as a result of the Executive Order ending certain benefits and a rising re-up rate may make possible another reduction in draft calls this summer.

THE LARGE NUMBER of January enlistments provided a bit of a strain for the Army training establishment, since without prior knowledge of the Executive Order and its effects at recruiting stations, the Army had set a 23,000 January draft call.

THE ARMY CANNOT WAIT much longer to name the next two divisions to participate in "Operation Gyroscope," the division rotation plan which gets underway this Summer with the switch of the 10th and 1st Infantry Divisions. Reason is that it takes at least six months for rotating divisions to make necessary preparations, including completion of packet training.

THE QUESTION HAS BEEN whether or not to commit one of the two airborne divisions, the 82d at Ft. Bragg, N. C., or the 11th at Ft. Campbell, Ky., to overseas duty. In any case, an announcement will be made shortly designating new "Gyroscope" units.

MORE LADIES IN BLUE will be a feature of the 137-wing Air Force. Plan announced last year was for WAF strength to dip from 9600 to a new level-off figure of 6000. But with its own recruiting service, the Air Force found it could maintain a higher WAF strength without lowering enlistment standards. So, a new long-range objective was set: 8300. It means recruiting 3600 WAF per year, instead of 2400.

TWO POWERFUL REPRESENTATIVES are headed for a legislative $180 million nautical engagement in the House. Chairman Cannon (D-Mo.) of the Appropriations Committee is opposed to a fifth Forrestal class carrier. Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) said this week he was glad the FY '56 budget provides funds for such a ship.

AROUND-THE-CLOCK DIET attention is being given to a group of 100 soldier-volunteers at Ft. Carson, Colo., undergoing a month-long nutrition test. Aim is to get rid of fattening foods from Army menus. The soldiers are confined to the post and are kept under constant surveillance. Every bite of food is measured. Among a battery of special tests is one in which the slimming soldiers are weighed while submerged in a 600-gallon water tank.

WIDE DISPERSION of Continental Air Defense Command units is creating special problems for chaplains, many of whom now must function as old-time "circuit riders" to reach small, isolated stations. Civilian ministers also are being utilized.

medical problems?

No, sir, not since we joined the Armed Forces Medical Aid Association. Through this non-profit organization the wife and kids get really great protection from most any medical or surgical problem that crops up.

And here's the big thing—I get this terrific protection for only $8.00 ($5.50 if you have no kids). AFMAA was chartered by and for servicemen, works for you in the ZI or overseas, gives you many benefits that apply in government hospitals, too. Write today.

RETIREMENT INCOME means FINANCIAL PLANNING

Here's why. You're probably putting some money in a savings account now with retirement in mind. BUT . . . did you know that the person who saved a dollar ten years ago now finds that it can buy about half what it could then?

To more and more people a planned investment in dividend paying securities through Mutual Fund shares has done much in offsetting that decline.

In the last several years, thousands of civilians and service personnel have received our counsel on investment planning for extra retirement income. We have helped many to start on the road to a sounder financial future through the planned purchase of Mutual Fund shares. We can help you, too.

For complete information on this sound approach to a more secure financial future, send for our free booklet, "The Modern Way to Invest."

GIVE ARMY BACK TO NCO's

Give the Army back to the NCO was the main thought expressed by IX Corps Commander, Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, when he made a luncheon address to the Board of Governors at the Sendai (Japan) Sergeants Mess recently.

General Hickey stressed the need of reinforcing the "backbone" of the Army by restoring the once established prestige of the non-commissioned officer corps.

The Corps Commander, himself a former non-commissioned officer, having gone from two stripes to three stars, spoke from experience as he stated: "The established prestige of the non-commissioned officer must always remain as a mark of recognition and respect. This fine club represents one of the many facets of NCO life which assist in that goal; however, it is not the many dining rooms and club rooms which will restore prestige to the non-coms; the Army must give the NCO back the authority and responsibility with which he was once invested."

Gen. Collins Named VP Of Transportation Co.

North American Van Lines, Inc., of Fort Wayne, Indiana, has announced the appointment of Maj. Gen. Harry J. Collins, USA-Ret., former commander of the famous Rainbow Division, as vice-president.

General Collins, who will be employed as a civilian for the first time in his post with North American, will handle public relations for the long-distance moving organization, operator of the longest over-the-road transportation system in the world.

James D. Edgett, president of North American Van Lines, said "We expect the General's counsel to be of value in many phases of our operation, which now includes ocean van moving service to Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Alaska in addition to our overland van service in all 48 states, Canada and Alaska."

As Military Governor and Commanding General of all troops in the American Zone in Austria during World War II, General Collins had as many as 4,000 non-military personnel working under his command at a given period, the North American Van Lines president said.

"He was responsible for the Austrian population of the Zone Command as well as 380,000 prisoners of war, who had to be discharged and rehabilitated, 500,000 displaced persons, and thousands of refugees. His administration achieved the establishment of good public relations, revitalization of trade, transportation, business, industry and farming; also the reestablishment of civil laws, currency, postal service and communication facilities."

General Collins maintains offices in Washington, D. C.

Defense Asks 2-Year Doctor-Dentist Draft

A two-year extension of the doctor-dentist draft act has been requested by the Defense Department.

The proposal extends to 1 July 1957, authority to require the special registration, classification and induction of medical, dental and allied specialist categories of personnel. Present authority expires on 1 July 1955.

The Defense Department, in asking for the extension, said "Although the number of physicians and dentists graduating from professional schools who are vulnerable for military service under the regular draft has been steadily increasing since 1950, available statistics do not indicate that the number of such persons is large enough to meet the projected needs of the Armed Forces for medical and dental personnel for the next two years."

President Eisenhower urged Congress in his 13 Jan. message to extend the doctor-dentist draft laws.

"Teammate" Will Boost Combat Ratio

The Army will give a boost to its steadily increasing ratio of combat to support personnel by replacing 12,000 military personnel with civilians during the first six months of 1955.

This will be called "Operation Teammate."

At the end of WWII, according to Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens, 43 out of every 100 soldiers were considered as part of the operational forces as opposed to support forces.

This was increased to 52 out of 100 by mid-1953 and is expected to reach 62 out of 100 by this coming June.

The Army said "Teammate" will permit retention in service of a number of units in the combat structure which otherwise would have been inactivated due to the reduced personnel ceiling. The military manpower savings expected have already been incorporated in the troop basis planned for the end of the current fiscal year in June.

Operation Teammate will affect the six continental U. S. Armies, the Military District of Washington, and the administrative and technical services.

When the present replacement program is completed in June, approximately 40,000 positions previously held by military personnel will have been filled by civilian employees over the past five years, the Army said.

The Army has carefully examined the positions in support-type functions in the continental United States to which military personnel have been assigned. Much of the preliminary work connected with the sizable replacement program under Operation Teammate has already been accomplished. The program will be completed in two phases, one ending 31 March and the other on 30 June.

With the completion of Operation Teammate, the Army feels it "will achieve an optimum balanced military-civilian team required to support the combat forces." Some positions, lending themselves to possible civilian employment, will continue to be held by military personnel because of the necessity for training personnel to staff similar positions in critical areas overseas.

SERVICE FAMILY NOTES

YONGSAN, KOREA—Mrs. John E. Hull, Mrs. Arthur W. Radford, and Mrs. Earle E. Partridge admire the wares at Eighth Army's Yongsan P.X. The occasion was the recent visit to Korea of the wives of several high-ranking U. S. officials.

MRS. Richard M. Nixon, the wife of the Vice President of the United States, making her first appearance at an officers' wives' club meeting, was the guest of honor when the Marine Officers' Wives' Club of Washington, D. C., met for its annual "White Elephant" luncheon, 19 Jan., at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Sharing honors as a guest of the club was Mrs. Neil K. Dietrich, wife of Rear Admiral Dietrich, Deputy Commander MSTs.

Mrs. Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., wife of the Marine Corps Commandant, and Mrs. Thomas A. Wornham, president of the club, with the two guests of honor, greeted members individually when a formal receiving line was formed shortly before the luncheon hour. Mrs. Virgil K. Banning made the introductions.

Mrs. Wornham, wife of Brigadier General Wornham, presided at a short business meeting after luncheon, and Mrs. Nixon and Mrs. Dietrich both spoke briefly, expressing their pleasure at being present.

In lieu of a program of entertainment a "Santa's Mistake" Sale was held, both during the social hour preceding luncheon and afterwards. Mrs. Nels Nelson, program chairman, was in charge of arrangements and funds raised were to be donated to the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and Airmen's Club. Each member arrived bearing her own "white elephant" and later departed, having purchased someone else's.

Hostesses for the day were wives of officers of the Fifth Marine Corps Reserve and Recruitment District, headed by Mrs. John R. Lanigan and Mrs. Frank L. Kilmartin. Among those assisting were Mrs. Miles P. Patrone, Mrs. Lyman D. Spurlock, Mrs. Ernest E. Codere, Mrs. Reginald R. Myers, Mrs. Wallace Henry, and Mrs. John K. Hogan.

In keeping with the "white elephant" theme, name tags were adorned with whimsically cavorting hand-painted elephants. More of the Disney-like creations acted as place cards at the head table. And a huge sequined and sparkling pachyderm surveyed happenings at the sale table.

Attractive green planter arrangements, forming miniature jungles for little white ceramic elephants centered the dining room tables and were later sold to the members. The head table was centered with a large bouquet of lavender gladioli and at each end was a unique creation of greens, huge purple grapes and silver leaves.

The club will hold a dinner-dance on 18 Feb. in place of its monthly luncheon.

Here Is On-The-Spot Housing Report From Army's Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.

The family housing problem for dependents at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., and the surrounding areas remains critical despite the fact a few of the surrounding communities are building units for rental purpose, according to the Post Billeting Officer.

At the present time there are 616 Government houses, 420 PHA houses, and 639 PHA trailers being occupied. In addition, all of the 243 on-post private trailer sites have been rented. In some cases the houses and trailers being rented do not offer the proper facilities for the size of the family.

900 Wait

The total waiting list for all available spaces is 900. This consists of 595 top three grades waiting for housing; 100 first three grades waiting for PHA trailers; 130 officers waiting for housing; and 75 first three grades and officers waiting for space for private trailers.

The waiting list has increased steadily since Jan. 1954. As a result, privates, PFCs and corporals with less than seven years' service are not included on the waiting list and must seek off-post accommodations. There are to date 1,600 soldiers with 4,187 dependents, totaling 5,767, housed at Ft. Leonard Wood.

The housing problem in the surrounding areas is also critical, according to the Chambers of Commerce of Richland, Rolla, Lebanon and Crocker.

In most cases, the units are rented the same day a vacancy occurs.

Rolla, a community of over 10,000, rents to about 600 Army personnel. The price range is slightly higher, compared to other surrounding areas offering the same facilities. An average furnished apartment rents for $35 and some go as high as $80. Unfurnished apartments are priced $45-$65, while four-room houses are generally found between $45 and $65.

With the exception of Rolla, most surrounding communities offer very few unfurnished apartments. Furnished apartments and houses are generally the only units to be found.

There is building done by individuals in most of the surrounding areas, but in no case is there any planned housing development.

Richland, a community of 1,100, about 28 miles from the front gate of Ft. Wood, houses 300 Army personnel and their dependents. The critical housing problem in this town is increased by highway construction workers competing for homes. In Richland there are no unfurnished apartments.

In all cases, the civic leaders of the various communities offer assistance in finding places to live. Despite the large number of personnel waiting for places to live, local builders have not much building for investment purposes.

Airmen Promotions Maintain '54 Pace

The Air Force will start airmen promotions in 1955 at just about the same pace with which it ended 1954.

Major commanders were advised this week that the February quota will permit 55,010 advancements, compared with 56,256 in the December 1954 quota.

The new quota permits 899 promotions to master sergeant (949 in December); 2293 to technical sergeant (2300); 10,873 to staff sergeant (10,865); 17,945 to airman first class (20,012); and 23,000 to airman second class (22,134).

The August quota was 54,631; the October limit was 54,900.

USAA Reports 32-Year Record of Growth in '54

Col. Charles E. Cheever, General Manager of United Services Automobile Association, San Antonio, Tex., has announced that 1954 witnessed the most successful year in that Association's 32-year history.

The growth of the Association is demonstrated by the fact that more new policies were written in 1954 than were in force at the end of 1947, after 25 years of operation. The net premiums written in 1954 of $23 million exceeded seven times the amount written in 1947, and approximately as many new members were added in the past year as there were total members at the end of 1947.

As of 31 Dec. 1954 the Association's membership totaled 221,138 policyholders. Of this total, 68,389 were Air Force officers, 59,984 were Army officers, 48,175 were Navy officers, and there were 9,992 Marine Corps officers.

Management Incentive Pay Not Acceptable

USAF military contractors have been informed that the current commercial business tendency to adopt management incentive plans to reward their alert executives and employees is not acceptable for defense contracts.

An excerpt from a memorandum to the Air Materiel Command from Assistant Secretary Roger Lewis (Materiel) reads: "It is the view of this office, which has been discussed with the Secretary and the Under-Secretary and coordinated with the Procurement Secretaries of Defense, Army and Navy, that payments under Management Incentive Plans are not proper costs under Defense contracts."

Procurement personnel are instructed to exclude consideration of management incentive compensation when negotiating new contracts. Further instructions are to be issued shortly to cover procedures on existing contracts. When this problem causes delay in converting letter contracts or price redetermination negotiations are instructed to inform Air Force Headquarters.

Industry observers have been hopeful that the new proposed cost allowance principles would contain a section allowing some incentive benefits to be considered reimbursable items of cost. Reports are persistent that Navy procurement officials do not agree with the Air Force on this attitude and have suggested that under certain conditions incentive benefits be incorporated in the new cost allowance regulations (Section XV, ASPR) as allowable costs.

AF Vet Joins ATA

Alex F. Ormsbee, assistant city editor of the Washington Daily News, will join the public relations staff of the Air Transport Association of America on 1 Feb. Willis Player, Vice President-Public Relations of the ATA, has announced.

Mr. Ormsbee, who served three years in the Air Force during WW II, two of which were overseas with a heavy bombardment group, has worked for the Washington Daily News since 1946.

Raytheon Lab Moves Ahead

The new electronics engineering and research laboratory at Wayland, Mass., being constructed for Raytheon Manufacturing Company, has moved into the second planned stage of construction ahead of schedule.

The Waltham electronics firm said that the original section of approximately 145,000 square feet, the cost of which was estimated at nearly $1,500,000, will be augmented by the second section of 80,000 square feet at an additional cost of roughly $750,000, to be built concurrently.

Maj. Capron Bliss PIO

Major Paul Capron, jr. has been assigned as Public Information Officer at the Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missiles Center, Fort Bliss, Tex.

Major Capron came to Fort Bliss from Korea in September of 1954.

GE Opens Electronics Center At Syracuse

General Electric Company on 22 Jan. opened a new two-building "Systems Center" to house its Heavy Military Electronic Equipment Department at Syracuse, N. Y.

The center will serve as headquarters for the company's development and manufacturing operations on powerful, extensive electronic "nerve centers" for military use.

The department carries on production and development programs for all the services, concentrating chiefly on air defense, ground warfare, communications, anti-submarine operations, strategic air operations, missile control, radiation instrumentation, air navigation and traffic control and component and circuitry.

The department also has a world-wide product service program which comprises field service, modernization overhaul and supply assistance, product analysis, technical training and publications for the various services.

"Fast, Fair and Final" Terminations Asked

A number of trade associations have formed special committees to consider problems resulting from the increasing number of terminated military contracts.

The Terminations Committee of the National Security Industry Association has launched a major study of current terminations regulations. This study has resulted from increasing concern by manufacturers over the delay in the disposal termination inventory and the settlement of termination claims.

The NSIA group has already made a comparison of Section VIII Termination of Contracts of the Air Force Procurement Instruction with the basic policies on terminations as set forth in Section VIII of the Armed Services Procurement Regulations. The consensus so far is that the Air Force has done a creditable job in implementing the basic policies. There are one or two areas, however, in which NSIA will take issue with the Air Force.

In addition, this committee is launching a complete analysis of the policies set forth in Section VIII of the ASPR, with principal emphasis being placed on current experiences of Government contractors. This analysis may lead to rather far-reaching recommendations for revisions to basic policy. The benchmark of the group is a return to the "fast, fair and final" settlement which underlay the World War II joint termination regulations issued under the Contract Settlement Act of 1944.

Allison Offers Airline Version of T56 Engine

A new American commercial turbo-prop engine is being offered to U. S. airlines and airframe manufacturers which exceeds the performance of any other turbo-prop engine available anywhere today. New York members of the Aviation Writers Association were told last week by Harold H. Dice, assistant general manager of the Allison Division of General Motors.

The engine is the Allison Model 501-D10, a commercial version of the Allison T56 turbo-prop engine now being built for the Lockheed C-130 four-engine transport of the Air Force. Allison also is offering for commercial use a three-bladed Aeroproducts propeller, matched with the 501 but not limited to that engine application.

The military version of the engine has completed "the most exacting model test ever required of a propeller type engine," Mr. Dice said. "This military 150 hour test also was observed by representatives of the C. A. A., looking toward the award of a Type Certificate for commercial operation of the engine."

It also was revealed that the first military version of this engine, the T56, was shipped to Lockheed for the C-130 military transport, 80 days ahead of schedule.

Benefit Assoc. Cuts Reserve Time For Insurance

The Armed Forces Relief and Benefit Association of Washington, D. C., announces that, effective 1 Feb. 1955, its insured membership is being made available to Reserve Officers on active service who have had three years of continuous active service instead of the previously required five years.

This Association offers its members scholarship grants for their children, emergency loans, and a $10,000 group life insurance plan for Regular and certain Reserve Officers stationed on active service anywhere and on any kind of duty with the Uniformed Services. The Secretary-Treasurer of the Association, Maj.

Gen. William H. Kasten, USA-Ret., states that it has over 96 million dollars of group life insurance in force for its members. This insurance is jointly underwritten by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston and the State Mutual Life Assurance Company of Worcester, Mass. General Kasten also stated that the Association has paid claims amounting to a total of almost two million dollars, during its eight years of existence.

General Edwin W. Rawlings, USAF, who is President of the Association, heads its Board of Directors consisting entirely of officers on active duty. This Board governs the Association for its many members who are stationed worldwide.

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE Fiscal Year 1956 Coast Guard budget calls for $4,310,700 more than was appropriated for FY '55.

Congressional approval is asked for $185,475,000; this year's budget is $181,164,300. These figures do not include nearly $16 million which will again be provided by the Defense Department for operation of the Coast Guard's Ocean Station Program.

The following breakdown gives the four major areas of appropriation for both FY '55 and FY '56:

Area	FY '55	FY '56
Operating Expenses	$155,809,300	$154,000,000
Acquisition, Construction and Improvements	3,000,000	7,000,000
Retired Pay	19,855,000	21,300,000
Reserve Training	2,500,000	3,175,000

Analysis of the requested budget amounts under the heading Operating Expenses reveals the following increases:

1. The Port Security Program will be extended to Charleston, S. C., New London, Conn., and San Diego, Calif. Eight new 95-foot vessels, one of which will be assigned to Norfolk, Va., will be made available for this purpose in 1956. The number of each vessel, its scheduled place of assignment, and its scheduled completion date is:
CG95312—Norfolk—1 July.
CG95313—Charleston—29 July.
CG95314—New London—15 August.
CG95315—New London—29 August.
CG95316—New London—15 September.
CG95317—San Diego—30 September.
CG95318—San Diego—14 October.
CG95319—San Diego—31 October.

The cost of the extended port security program, along with related shore support, totals $999,675.

2. Replacement of obsolete balsa life rafts, $212,370.
 3. Increased aircraft maintenance, $945,270.
 4. Additional personnel for support of aircraft (P5M) and aviation facilities, $132,847.
 5. Maintenance of recently decommissioned vessels, $34,000.
 6. Operation of unmanned aides to navigation established during 1955, $59,403.
 7. Restoration of aviation training to required levels, $171,500.
- Other program increases are:
1. Development of preliminary design plans for a vessel type to replace the present 125-foot and 165-foot classes of patrol craft, $50,000.
 2. Procurement of three P5M aircraft as replacements for PBM's, $6,000,000.
 3. Nose hangar construction for P5M maintenance, $100,000.
 4. Establishment of navigation aides to mark improvement projects scheduled by the Corps of Engineers and other aides to navigation, $470,000.
 5. Consolidation of facilities at Willapa Lifeboat Station, Tokeland, Wash., $79,000.
 6. Electrification, renovation of family quarters, and reduction of the complement at Point Arguello Loran Station, Surf, Calif., $85,000.
 7. Survey and preparation of plans for the replacement of Cornfield Point Lightship, with fixed light, $30,000.
 8. Replacement of bulkhead and buoy slab at the St. Petersburg Depot, $85,000.

Gen. Sandretto Named Asst. Vice Pres. of FTL

Brig. Gen. Peter C. Sandretto, USAFR, has been appointed an assistant vice president of Federal Telecommunication Laboratories, a division of International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation.
General Sandretto, a technical director of FTL, will serve as general coordinator for military research and development projects. During WW II, he planned and established military electronics in the Pacific area. His work centered chiefly on the field of radio navigation and radar counter-measures.

Aviation Engineers Set Ground Safety Award

The Aviation Engineer Force will award a safety trophy quarterly to the unit with the best ground safety record.
Brig. Gen. John C. B. Elliott, USAF, AEF Commander, said the award would be based on reductions in ground accidents, efficiency of the accident reporting system, quality of the accident prevention education and training program, quality of accident prevention and engineering activities, and initiative displayed in developing and operating accident promotional campaigns.

Col. Martin Heads Flight Control Lab

The Air Research and Development Command has established a Flight Control Laboratory, commanded by Col. John L. Martin, jr., USAF, at the Wright Air Development Center, Ohio.

The Center now has an even dozen major laboratories working on particular problems of aviation science and engineering.

Colonel Martin and his assistant, Lt. Col. Benjamin H. Ferer, USAF, will consolidate research and development work in development of controls.

The Armament, Equipment and Aircraft Laboratories at WADC previously shared this task.

Pentagon Proposal to Standardize Jet Engines Arouses Industry Protest

The Pentagon efforts to reorganize "the present shotgun approach" to the development and production of aircraft turbine engines has aroused concern among the five jet engine manufacturers and a strong protest from the Aircraft Industries Association who say that if a proposed directive to standardize turbojet engines is put in effect the result would be "catastrophic" and the industry ruined "before it would become apparent and a change effected."

The proposed eight page directive is a product of the Office of Applications Engineering of Assistant Secretary Frank D. Newberry and was prepared by Mr. F. T. Hague, Director of Aircraft and Marine Craft, after a six months survey of defense policies of jet engine buying.

Pentagon officials state that the AIA is "unduly alarmed" and hint broadly that two of the five jet engine firms believe that the plan would be both effective and economical. It was denied that the proposed directive was part of any plan to cut down the number of types of military aircraft.

In explanatory notes accompanying the proposed policy directive, it was reported that the period ahead "is probably the most important in turbine engine history from a development and financial standpoint." New models will be needed for:

USN Picks 313 Reserves For Capt. & Cdr. Ranks

Navy Staff Corps selection boards, which convened on 4 January, have picked 313 Naval Reserve officers for advancement to captain and commander.

Of this number, 31 were named for four stripes and 282 for three stripes in the seven Staff Corps. Included in the selections were four women who were chosen for the rank of commander. They are: Lieutenant Commanders Lucy D. Ozarin, MC; Marion L. Fowler, MSC; Sara G. Krout, DC; and Ruth M. Sachs, SC.

Here is a breakdown of the numbers selected for both ranks in each Corps:

	To Captain	To Commander
Supply	2	84
Engineer	8	70
Dental	3	63
Medical	17	23
Chaplain	1	18
Medical Service ..		16
Nurse		8

The Navy expects that all promotions will be made by 1 July.

HONOR FT. LEAVENWORTH

The 125th anniversary of Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., calls for a special postage stamp in commemoration of the Fort's establishment, according to Senator Frank Carlson (R-Kans.).

The Senator has introduced a bill authorizing the Postmaster General to issue such a stamp beginning 9 May, the day on which Ft. Leavenworth was founded in 1827.

QC To Use Nuclear Materials In Research

The Atomic Energy Commission has approved utilization of spent reactor fuel assemblies by the Army Quartermaster Corps as sources of radiation in food sterilization research.

A fuel assembly is highly radioactive upon emerging from the nuclear reactor. However, its radioactivity must subside, undergo a "cooling" period, before the cache of fissionable material can be removed.

Under the arrangement announced by the AEC, Quartermaster Corps at the Dugway Proving Ground, Utah, will have custody of some of the fuel assemblies during the "cooling" period to utilize the gamma radiation, which hitherto has been lost, in food sterilization research.

subsonic to true supersonic capability.

3. Vertical take-off planes.

6. Replacement aircraft capable of long-range subsonic cruise and operation up to Mach 2 in the tropopause.

It was stated that military spending for turbojets is now at the rate of $1 billion a year with an additional $200 million going for new engine and product development.

Reporting on present engine status, it was indicated that there are now 10 turbojets in production which power 29 combat airframes. Two of the 10 power 67% of all current production types. There are three new types under development, and these presumably will largely power the 19 future combat airframe types under consideration.

Immediate engine needs were placed in the range between 6600 and 22,500 pounds thrust, with the long range estimate being 4400-33,000 pounds. Engines available in 1957 will run between 9300 and 15,000 pounds thrust.

These immediate needs, it was pointed out, could be met by four engine sizes (6700; 10,000; 15,000; 22,500) if the principle were adopted. "With the current level of military turbojet development funds, two engine sizes could be contracted for each successive year and in a few years the proposed policy would be in effect," the Pentagon's explanatory notes stated.

A 7 January letter to Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson signed by Adm. DeWitt C. Ramsey, USN-Ret., AIA president, emphasizes that, "this is believed to be a matter of much more than normal importance" and added that it represents "the considered judgment of the responsible people of the aviation industry. . . ." The policy directive is being opposed not only by a unanimous vote of the AIA board of governors but more specifically by H. M. Horner, Roy T. Hurley, C. W. LaPierre, Leslie E. Lynde, and E. B. Newell, respective heads of the Pratt & Whitney, Curtiss-Wright, General Electric, Westinghouse, and Allison engine companies, the five major power plant producers. Secretary Wilson was asked to meet with a select AIA committee to discuss the matter.

Chief "Pat" Byrne Wins Legion of Merit, Cited As "Legend Among Naval Aviators"

Chief Boatswain Patrick J. Byrne, USN, has been awarded the Legion of Merit.

The presentation was made recently by Assistant Navy Secretary for Air James H. Smith, jr., who made a special flying trip to NAS, Lakehurst, N. J., to honor the Navy's most senior Boatswain.

Chief Byrne, a veteran of 36 years, rose to the rank of Lieutenant Commander during WW II, but reverted to Chief Boatswain in 1950.

In part, his citation reads as follows: "For exceptional meritorious conduct in

NAVY SUBSTITUTES NAMES FOR NUMBERS

The first group of numbered Naval vessels have been given names.

Effective 1 Feb., the ADG-8 will be known as the Lodestone; the ADG-9, the Magnet; the ADG-10, the Deperm; and the ADG-11, the Amphere. ADG's are Degaussing Vessels.

In a letter to VAdm. A. S. Merrill, USN-Ret., who is now a member of the Greater New Orleans Council of the Navy League, giving a roundup of the Navy's accomplishments in the field of service attractiveness, Admiral Robert B. Carney, USN, Chief of Naval Operations, last year cited the naming of Naval vessel and crafts as a move being made to increase a man's sense of identification with his ship, and adding to the dignity and satisfaction of a Naval career.

It has been learned that 105 LST's have been given names which have not yet been made public. In addition, names for 50 or 60 LST's in the Reserve Fleet are planned.

The Navy is also considering names for several other groups of craft.

USMC Plans 4,100 Staff NCO Promotions In '55

The Marine Corps plans to advance about 3,500 sergeants to four-stripe rank, as well as award fifth and sixth stripes to approximately 600 Staff NCO's, during 1955.

In making the announcement, Headquarters stressed that in accordance with plans made through 30 June 1955, the Commandant "does not contemplate the involuntary reversion of any enlisted personnel to a lower grade."

Current planning calls for the promotion of about 100 T/Sgts. to M/Sgt. and 500 S/Sgts. to T/Sgt. After the convention of selection board, these promotions are scheduled to be effected during October and November.

The promotions to four-stripe rank are slated for September and October, and will be made by unit commanders, based on cutting scores to be established by headquarters.

In addition, a substantial number of promotions to sergeant and corporal also will be made by the common cutting score method. It is planned to make these advancements in cycles in April and May, and in October and November.

PAY CORRECTION

New pay scales printed in THE JOURNAL last week show a boost to $296.39 for E-7s with under two years' service. This figure should read $206.39, which is the present basic pay for master sergeants and chief petty officers. No change is recommended in this category.
